ANIVADO launches Global Equine Nutrition I: an online course about horse feeding designed for an international audience

Interested in Equine Nutrition? Start today with the online Global Equine Nutrition I course by ANIVADO! This course combines latest applied and scientific knowledge for national and international audiences at various levels (basic – bachelor – masters – expert). In the area of Equine Science ANIVADO will initially focus on nutrition, health and performance.

Global Equine Nutrition I (GEN I) is the first international course to be launched on the ANIVADO platform. This course will give an in-depth grounding in Equine Nutrition Science for those which already have previous basic knowledge in equine or animal nutrition with a view of feeding horses in different zones around the world. Modules will underpin theoretical knowledge of digestive physiology and processes leading to an in depth grounding in Ration Calculation and Evaluation. It forms the perfect basis for those looking to refresh their latest understanding and knowledge. This course is aimed at a study level of final year Bachelor degree or first year of a Masters Course and is brought to you by Dr David van Doorn (ANIVADO) and Dr Andrea Ellis (UNEQUI).

The ANIVADO platform is designed to allow for flexible and affordable studying. This offers a great opportunity to work in collaboration with institutions or companies who may not always be able to employ a subject specialist (e.g. equine nutrition scientist) to pass on high quality knowledge, effectively to students (or for internal CPD). Please, visit the ANIVADO website, www.ANIVADO.com for more information.
